

Pensions: An International Journal
Call For Papers

Volume 13
For publication in 2008
Editor: Robin Ellison

Pensions has established itself as a leading publication on the day-to-day practice of pensions administration, law and investment.

The Journal was acquired by Palgrave Macmillan in 2005 and now sits proudly alongside a prestigious list of business and management titles. A full list of Palgrave Macmillan Journals, along with online sample issues, can be viewed at our website www.palgrave-journals.com.

We seek practitioner perspectives on subjects related to pensions, the emphasis upon practical issues. All rigorous and thoughtful conceptual papers are encouraged. A wide variety of topics are suitable for the journal, and in the past these have included:

- Defined benefit pension funds: Identifying, quantifying and managing asset-liability risks.
- Is the UK saving enough and should we be compelled to save more?
- What can the UK learn from the Swedish pension reforms?
- PAYG in an ageing society: The case of Sweden versus Germany
- UK pensions simplification: Implications for overseas employees
- Pension sharing on divorce: The new procedure
- The standardisation of due diligence questionnaires: Practical ambition or dream?

The readership of the journal includes pension professionals, lawyers, accountants, corporate directors and managers.

Submissions are welcomed in the form of abstracts and/or papers. We look for papers between 2,500 and 7,000 words and full notes for prospective authors are available at http://www.palgrave-journals.com/pm/author_instructions.html
